HOW TO READ THIS REPORT

This is not a typological endpoint. It is a practical energy route that helps you see what feeds you, burdens you and brings you back into balance in professional interaction. The EG-code is never read as a label, but always as a language for energy in behaviour. Read the profile as a friendly mirror — not to pin yourself down, but to engage more consciously with your energy in connection with others.

01 Your energy at a glance

What you give, what you need, where energy drains away and how you regain balance.

ENERGY FLOW

RgEEN

relational · group-oriented · distinctly extraverted · intuitive

ENERGY COST

- Z

caring as an energy cost

EG = Energetic Behaviour · energy mode: distinctly extraverted

GIVES ENERGY

You give energy through enthusiasm, openness and jointly exploring possibilities rather than problems.

RECEIVES ENERGY

You recharge through interaction, variety, brainstorming together and space to explore ideas out loud.

LOSES ENERGY

Constantly having to maintain relationships and harmony drains energy when there is no space for your own boundaries.

RESTORES ENERGY

Name your own boundary sooner, dare to say no and share the caring with others.

THE CORE MOVEMENT

— brings an expressive, connecting flow of energy that brings people along into possibilities to collaboration.

02 The reading in 2 minutes

A compact summary of how this energy spontaneously works in collaboration.

— spontaneously gives energy by sharing enthusiasm, connecting people and exploring possibilities together.

Flowing naturally

— stays in energy when there is space for contact, variety, brainstorming and exploring possibilities together.

Consciously
aligning

Energy drains predictably in one place. Constantly having to maintain relationships and harmony drains energy when there is no space for your own boundaries.

Under pressure

Under stress, energy can accelerate, harden or withdraw. For those around you, this can feel as though the usual engagement suddenly shifts into tension or distance.

IN ONE IMAGE

— flourishes in contexts where contact, variety, shared team spirit and meaningful movement come together.

03 What does the 2MINSCAN measure?

The 2MINSCAN describes energetic behaviour in a professional context: how someone gives, receives, retains and loses energy in collaboration.

Behaviour

What someone spontaneously shows in interaction with colleagues, teams, employees or coachees.

Energy-effect

How that behaviour opens, strengthens, blocks or puts energy under pressure.

Work context

Which environment supports, brings out or drains this behaviour.

NOT TO BE USED AS

Not a talent test. Not a passion measurement. Not a selection instrument. Not a potential assessment. Not a diagnosis.

USE IT FOR

Reflection, coaching, team development, leadership development, communication and context alignment.

04 How your energy moves

The EG-code is not read here as a label, but as a language for energy in professional behaviour.

R

Relationship-oriented

Energy starts when alignment with others feels safe, respectful and genuine.

g

Group-oriented

You give energy by bringing people together and looking for shared movement.

EE

Distinctly extraverted

Your energy moves strongly outward through interaction, conversation and shared activity. You recharge primarily through contact with others.

N

Intuitive

You pick up signals that have not yet been fully articulated and are oriented toward what is possible.

-z

Caring as an energy cost

Constantly caring for relationships and harmony can cost energy when there is no space for your own boundaries or progress.

05 How you give energy to others

This is how others experience your energy style in collaboration.

GIVES ENERGY

You give energy through enthusiasm, openness and jointly exploring possibilities rather than problems.

RECEIVES ENERGY

You recharge through interaction, variety, brainstorming together and space to explore ideas out loud.

How others experience you

Warm, enthusiastic, connecting, motivating and focused on shared movement.

How you experience a team

As a living system in which energy, ideas and atmosphere also determine whether work flows.

06 What you set in motion in teams

How your energy has an effect on others — without reading this as talent or evaluation.

Enthusiasm

You lift the atmosphere and warm others up to a shared movement.

Connection

You bring people together and make it easy to join in.

Possibilities

You open up perspective and look for openings instead of getting stuck on problems.

Movement

You keep the energy alive and ensure ideas keep flowing.

WHAT THIS DOES IN COLLABORATION

Your energy sets things in motion in a team: the atmosphere opens up, ideas start flowing and people join in more easily.

07 The context that recharges you

Energy arises in the interplay between your behaviour and the environment in which you work.

Culture

Gives energy

Openness, humour and space for ideas.

Requires attention

Watch out when everything becomes too serious or too rigid.

Work rhythm

Gives energy

Variety, brainstorming together and exploring possibilities.

Requires attention

Watch out with long detailed processes without variety.

Leadership

Gives energy

Inspiring, engaging and empowering leadership.

Requires attention

Watch out with cold control or lack of recognition.

08 Where energy drains away

Energy loss becomes visible when the environment leaves too little space for what naturally feeds you.

Unspoken tension

Trying to carry too much

Not daring to set your own boundary

Constantly mediating

Conflict that keeps simmering

WHY THIS COSTS ENERGY

Constantly having to maintain relationships and harmony drains energy when there is no space for your own boundaries.

WHAT HELPS

Name your own boundary sooner, dare to say no and share the caring with others.

LEGEND OF THE EG-CODE

Capital letters show what gives energy or drives direction in behaviour. A minus sign shows an energy cost. In RgEEN-z, -z means this part costs more energy than it gives.

09 When energy comes under pressure

Stress reflexes do not show who you are. They show where energy is under pressure and where deliberate slowing down helps.

ongeduldig

afstandelijk

koppig

NO JUDGEMENT, JUST INFORMATION

These signals become useful when you see them as an invitation to slow down, name your boundary and realign. Knowing your shadow side helps you find the positive core behind it.

10 Collaborating with profiles that operate differently

Some profiles gain energy from a very different style. In that case it helps to make your style more translatable.

YOUR NATURAL STYLE

Contagious
Enthusiastic Connecting
Possibility-oriented

STYLE THAT REQUIRES ADJUSTMENT

Task-oriented
More business-like
Factual
Results-oriented

BRIDGING BEHAVIOUR

Prepare your core message, define the desired outcome in advance, bring factual arguments and follow a clear agenda. Moderate emotional intensity and allow time for internal processing.

THE BRIDGE SENTENCE

You do not need to lose your style. You simply make it more receivable for people who recharge differently.

11 Leadership, equivalents and integrity in use

Leadership is read here as energy-effect on others, not as formal power or position.

Giving direction

You give direction by enthusing people around a shared vision.

Making connection

Your leadership develops through openness, energy and engagement.

Opening up possibilities

You help a team look beyond problems toward options.

Maintaining focus

Your energy stays sustainable when you connect enthusiasm with follow-through.

RELATIONAL ENERGY-EFFECT

This profile points to leadership that strengthens connection, enthusiasm and shared movement.

IMPORTANT SCIENTIFIC NUANCE

The 2MINSCAN is based on Jungian-inspired preferences. That theory has not been validated in the same way as modern psychometric models. It can nevertheless offer a useful language for making group dynamics, preferred behaviour and energy needs discussable in a professional context. The 2MINSCAN makes no statements about who someone is, what their potential is or why they show this behaviour.

IF YOU WANT TO LOOK DEEPER

When the question is no longer about energy management but about the why behind preferred behaviour, underlying patterns or deeper characteristics, a TaPas Kompas can be a careful next step.

Keep moving with your own energy by energising others and exploring possibilities together out loud

Energy is not a fixed label. It is a movement between you, the other person and the context in which you work.

WHEN YOUR ENERGY FLOWS

You feel more space, connection and the urge to explore possibilities together with others.

WHEN ENERGY DRAINS

Do not see it as a failure, but as a signal to slow down, set a boundary or realign.
